

The Water Balloon Cannon – the cure to annoying siblings

Do you suffer from annoying siblings? If so, then use the 'water balloon cannon' to fire water balloons at them. Soon you will notice that your sibling becomes much nicer towards you. How does the machine work?

- First of all you will need to fill the tank up with water. To start the machine running you need to press the button on top of the water-tank. (This button can only be activated by your finger print so that your siblings cannot use it on you!). This will trigger the hands to start working. The first hand will put the water balloon securely on the tap nozzle. Once the water balloon is in place, the hand presses the button on top of the water tank again, and the water is pumped from the tank into the balloon. When the balloon is full, it will just drop off into the bucket and automatically seal.
- Next, you will need to pull a lever attached to the vacuum. Once you have pulled the lever the vacuum will suck up the water balloon and place it in the cannon ready to fire at your siblings.
- Attached to the cannon is a steering wheel so that you can control where you fire. Move the steering wheel to turn the cannon so that it is aiming at the target, then pull the lever to fire the water balloon.
- It should take about 1 and a half minutes from when you press the start button to when you fire the balloon, and you can only fire one water balloon at a time.
- You might want to do this in your garden when your parents aren't around, so you don't get in trouble for soaking the house with water!

Use one of these amazing machines and you will never have to suffer annoying siblings again.
